

Strategy Tool: Increasing Opportunities to Respond

Increasing Opportunities to Respond in My Classroom

First, identify which strategies you will use to increase your use of pacing and opportunities to respond. Ensure that the academic questions that you pose to students are both relevant and rigorous. Be mindful about which students are being called on so that you can include all of your students in an equitable manner. Consider the steps you will need to make to put the strategy to use. Finally, determine when you will include these strategies in your lessons and everyday classroom routines.

Be sure to plan how you will use the strategy and how you will provide the students with clear behavioral expectations regarding the strategies you have chosen.
